LLY 'ROUND THE RAMEUMPTON horses and cars and people were all gathered around for an end-of-the-parade political rally at Heritage Halls parking lot Monday evening. Final campaigning begins today for all election hopefuls.

Final Campaigning Gets Underway

al campaigning for student and class offices got under way early this morning as candidates hastened to their posters in noticeable on the quad.

OPEN FORUM today at 2:30 in 260 Engineering Science will give studentbody dental candidates a chance to present their views and present their qualifications for the final ticket for student-president will be Diane and Max Pinagar. Miss is now president of the e., and Pinagar is student-vice president of finance. For the position of president of culture are Diane and Max Pinagar. ## Two Chemists To Get Annual 'Utah Awards'

Joseph K. Nichols, a Brigham Young University professor of chemistry, and Dr. Sherman E. Christensen, professor emeritus of Utah State University in Logan, will receive the annual "Utah Award" of the Salt Lake section of the American Chemical Society.

The presentation will be made at a banquet Thursday at 7 p.m. in the University of Utah Union Building.

The "Utah Award" is made to individuals who have made outstanding contributions to the field of chemistry while residing in the area served by the society's Salt Lake City section.

PROFESSOR NICHOLS is from American Fork. He received his bachelor's degree in physics and mathematics from BYU and his master's degree from Stanford. He joined the BYU faculty in 1933, was chairman of the Physics Department from 1946 to 1958, and has taught part time since then.

Dr. Christensen, who is retired, is a graduate of the University of Utah and the University of Michigan.

As an example of the "foolish" U.S. policy Tomlinson said that after lending $250,000,000 to Argentina, Pan American Airlines still has to file a petition to the Air Ministry week by week in order to keep flying.

"WE'VE BEEN

cowed by Castro and his followers," continued Tomlinson, who spoke at a forum assembly Monday. He said that

Wheeling and Dealing

In his first novel, "City Boy," Herman Wouk describes activities at a summer youth camp somewhere in the East. As the summer is drawing to a close and the campers are getting anxious to go home, the camp staff has a difficult time keeping them occupied.

One of the plans which is instituted to "keep things going," in the waning days of summer is an all-camp competition. The campers are divided into two groups, the REDS and the BLUES.

The two groups vie in all sorts of games and athletic contests. Feeling runs high and the youngsters are whipped into a frenzy. Everything depends on winning.

As he describes the events, Wouk tells how the members of the opposing factions grow to hate each other. Long after the summer camp ends and even when youngsters are grown, they continue to hold grudges and harbor ill feelings against some member of the opposite team. The intense competition and the frenzy with which the children participate in the activities causes deep and permanent damage to some of them—in the novel.

Friday on the Brigham Young University campus when the last ballot is fed into the IBM counting machine and the last tally is made on the tote sheet, there will be a new executive and class officers.

There will be new executive and class officers. For the vast majority of the student body the outcome won't be earthshaking. BYU will go on next year much as it has this year, and for years passed. For all the electioneering and wheeling and dealing that goes on during elections—things don't change very much.

The vast majority of the students continue to come to class, go home, go to movies, and that's that.

But for some individuals this election could be a near trauma producing event. Some individuals get so wrapped up in the wheeling and dealing that they lose their bearings. They make phone calls, and speak in low tones about "certain things we believe you should know . . ."

For these selected individuals to step, take a deep breath and think. When campaigning starts to get off the issues and get on to personalities and things which are strictly up to the individual, then it's time to call a halt. What the heck, two billion people in the world don't even know BYU exists. So let's get off this world-coming-to-an-end kick.

To the Dogs? Nope!

From time to time the word goes out that our young people are going to the dogs. Furthermore, says "the word," no one is doing anything about the trend that is apparently turning our high school students into moral and intellectual morons.

It would perhaps be gratifying or at least enlightening to those who pass "the word," that someone is doing something. A couple of good examples of "doing something" were apparent on the Brigham Young University campus over the weekend.

In the first instance more than 1,000 junior high and senior high school students were on the campus Saturday participating in BYU's annual "Foreign Language Festival," sponsored by the Department of Modern Languages.

These young people participated in various activities, reciting poetry, competing in vocabulary contests, giving speeches—in foreign languages, including Spanish, German, French, Russian and Arabic.

The other area which would seem to indicate that all is not black on the youthful horizon was the science fair held Saturday in the Social Hall. In this instance, we see scientific projects built by students of this area.

The persons who initiate these projects and carry them out, are working full time, teaching classes or fulfilling university obligations. The fact that they are willing to take on the additional responsibility of aiding the youth is highly commendable.

Safety Valve by the Readers

A Clarification

Dear Editor:

Elections on BYU campus give the students the opportunity to get familiar with the democratic process. There is need in our society for people who have honest motives and who have the courage to do what is right despite various pressure groups.

AT BYU we can learn to carry on honest elections and in the way in which we feel the rest of the country would be proud. Such practices as personal attacks on a candidate's character is not the highest type of campaigning.

It has come to my attention that several people on campus have questioned the religious standing of Diane Hatch, who is a member of my ward. I would like to state as her bishop that she is in good standing in the church, has been active in my ward, is involved in the church, and is dedicated to serving the student body in the best possible way.

I HOPE the students of BYU can choose candidates who will contribute the most to the school rather than the few who are fixated on some unkind remarks of some unthinking campaigners.

Harvey J. Fletcher, Bishop
BYU Twenty-Third Ward

Candidates

Dear Editor:

In reading over the recently printed platforms of the presidential candidates, one might be inclined to wonder just how carefully plan the statements were—or even how becoming such a candidate.

One or two HDFS classes would suffice, I'm sure, to give far more examples of individuals who, when considered adults, have grown to maturity faster than those unfortunate people who have had to wait for maturity to catch up to them somehow. Doesn't capability of someone's own self come as a result of education?

However, certainly student government had far more to offer than what is mentioned elsewhere in the articles: shouldn't the government of the students govern them as well as provide jobs for them, and another to express the opinion of the students? There is a well justified feeling on the part of many that this "opinion" is seldom heard even where expressed.

If only one of the candidates could understand the needs and desire of the student body would be better considered or even not quashed—he would get my vote and many others too.

Tom Oish

Engineers Again

Dear Editor:

I realize that this reply will be quite late but the mail is very slow reaching us down here. After reading the article titled "Able Engineer," I fell a great harm has been done to BYU engineering.

I AM a graduate of a few years back, and do not know if you still have it. "You had the opportunity to work in the professional engineering societies. One of the primary aims of these societies is to develop 'professionalism' among the aspiring engineers." —Richard L. Billstrom, B.E.S. in E.E., Class of 1958, San Jose, Costa Rica

Finalists

Students will begin casting ballots Thursday to select their studentbody officers for the 1960-61 school year.

In an effort to aid students in making intelligent choices the Daily Universe today is printing the "platforms" of five top candidates.

Tomorrow the Universe will run statements by the candidates for class presidencies.

Candidates were requested to make short statements cause of space limitations.

For more elections information, see page 1.

Diane Hatch . . . proposes to broaden student experience.

Diane Hatch

A complete organization capable of carrying out all types of programming exists here (our student government and student groups.)

We must now encourage these students to program within a broadened scope to give students experience which will be valuable throughout their lives.

Student government must accept the responsibility for (1) involving students within their educational process; (2) producing programs to help solve university-wide problems from a student level we have a unique opportunity to serve (3) representing students; and (3) communicating effectively between the student body and the administration and vice versa.

Diane Hatch . . . seeks post as relations vice president.

Dean Champion

During the last two years, the pep and enthusiasm of this school has dropped considerably. It is time to bring back that enthusiasm. We invite pep rallies shortly before each game so that students can carry this enthusiasm to the game.

To achieve this, I propose to set up a well functioning production committee to coordinate student ideas in achieving these goals.

Second, the publicity this year has been at an all-time low on the campus. I suggest that the publicity committee increase its budget for publicity next year instead of just a small portion of it. This will greatly increase the response and attendance at all school functions.

Max Pinegar . . . wants more student opinion.

Max Pinegar

Student government has three main functions: (1) to provide the opportunity for self-government through services to others; (2) to provide valuable experience through added responsibilities; and (3) to provide an outlet for student opinions.

I propose to fulfill these functions through the following methods: (a) include in the Senate, ex-officio members of Senate, representatives for the B.M.S., A.M.S. and other organizations; (b) I propose to give students the opportunity to voice their opinions on issues which come before the Executive Council by holding open meetings of the Executive Council; (c) I propose to increase the amount of Dance Exchanging and Academic Emphasis; (d) I propose to encourage integrity in all areas of student activity.

Keith Terry . . . seeks election for student president.

Keith Terry

The primary function of student government is to promote the ideals and standards of Brigham Young University and to safeguard the responsibilities and privileges of the studentbody.

In the office of Vice Presidents, Student Relations, emphasis on publicity, pep, public relations and international student affairs.

I pledge myself to: 1. Uphold high standards of University and the student body. 2. Increase the status of the studentbody in the eyes of the public. 3. Work with the administration in order to improve present publicity privileges.

Responsibilities of Social in two major areas—student dances and the student body. There is a definite need for casualness and informality in student body dances. Craig Christensen
Craig Christensen, junior class business manager and national debate champion, is seeking the finance vice presidency.

In finance Christensen pledges: (1) annual publication of periodic financial statements that students might know what happens to student body funds; (2) appointment of a student body auditor for fiscal control and to assist in budget preparation.

Christensen, formerly IOC Chief Justice, notes that the Vice President is an executive as well as an administrator, and suggests that we have one if the student body in organizations, at least one member of the Executive Council should be thoroughly acquainted with organization problems.

Farrell Lines
It has been my opportunity for part of this year to serve as assistant financial vice president. This insight and experience into the financial and expenditures of our school will be of great help to me in serving as vice president, if elected.

If elected I propose a closer working relationship between student and officers. Each student should know the problems which confront our University.

Likewise students should know where our money is budgeted. Each month our office receives a detailed report from Machine Accounting relating to our expenditures for that month. I propose to publish this audit in a statement, so all can be aware of how our budget is spent.

Dixie Randall
The unique features of the Brigham Young University assembly program, Program Bureau and lyceum series provide the student body and faculty with wholesome and cultural entertainment. These areas are vital to our life.

I would like to promote interest in the assembly and lyceum programs through increased participation on the part of organizations in assemblies and through giving students an opportunity to have a voice in the lyceum programming.

I would also like to initiate a program of cultural growth and appreciation which would be emphasized and encouraged much like the Exchange Dance and Academic Drama programs.

'Americas Need One Another,' Advises Tomlinson

by Judy Woolstenhulme
University Staff Writer

'Look Southward, Uncle'—The Americans need one another." This slogan and challenge was hurled to the people of the United States by Edward Tomlinson, inter-American affairs authority, in Monday's forum assembly.

TOMLINSON said he felt Latin America should be important to Americans and they should clear up their misconceptions of their southern neighbors.

The Latin-American republics as a whole are no longer backward nations.

They have made great strides in economic development and now rival the United States in production of consumer goods. Commenting on the Latin American progress and development, Tomlinson said, "Diversity everywhere is present."

IN EXPLAINING THE LATIN American point of view, Tomlinson said that the Latin-Americans felt neglected when the United States spent millions helping Europe rebuild after World War II.

It should be cause of concern to Americans that the Communist countries are now making a great bid for Latin America, he commented. They are spending over $100 million a year to the Latin American countries to realize that they are facing competition from every nation of the earth next door.

CONCERNING THE magnificent reception Eisenhower enjoyed on his good will tour,

Tomlinson said, "The Latin Americans were easily paying tribute to the man who won the victory in the greatest war in history. They were not hailing the president of the United States."

English Distance Ace Enters Special Event

An English distance runner who is now a citizen of Ireland, spent last year in Canada, and is now attending school in the United States, has become the first special event star to accept a bid to BYU's Invitation Meet.

RICHARD CUDDIHY, who has run the two-mile in less than nine minutes, will run the 3,000-meter steeplechase against two BYU runners in a special event. The race, which will be part of Saturday afternoon's program, will be featured in the Y's 47th annual Invitation Meet next week in Provo.

Since the 3,000-meter steeplechase is also an Olympic event, there is a chance both Cuddihy and one of BYU's runners, Gary Griffeth, may bid for an Olympic team berth this summer.

Although Cuddihy is attending Oregon State College in Corvallis, he would likely compete in this event as a representative of his adopted country, Ireland.

GRIFFETH, the Skyline two-mile champion, will team with Terry Jeffers, a freshman from Idaho Falls, in the run with Cuddihy. A special course for the run, including the water jump, is being prepared on the playing field.

The 26-year-old Englishman has been clocked in under nine minutes in the two-mile, and figures to be one of OSC's top runners as soon as he is eligible to compete for the Beavers.

Collegiate record for the 3,000-meter steeplechase is 9:16.5, and the winning time in the national AAU meet last season was 9:19.1. Best time ever recorded was 8:40.8, which was turned in by Phil Coleman of Chicago in a meet in Poland two years ago.

Gary Griffeth set this event for the first time last year, turned in a creditable 9:19.0 in his initial effort.
